Wing-A-Lings always brings the flavor to the kitchen and now this Central New York company is starting to make a national name for itself by not only competing, but also winning competitions. Recently, winning first prize in a Texas competition, a state known for its barbeque.

Wing-A-Lings entered their Baa-Baa Blackened Seasoning into a competition in the Lone-Star State and won in the seafood category. Owner Shanin Stoddard talks about how out of thousands of peers, their seasoning stood out and won first place. Stoddard believes that their seasoning won because of their unique flavor and because it is low in salt. Not only did Wing-A-Lings win first place, but they also won 3rd place for their logo and 3rd place for their Bloody Mary Morning Rim Rub.

Wing-A-Lings also is finding ways to give back to the community. They offer a trio box set that can be used for fundraising and Wing-A-Lings will give back 30 percent. The box comes with three different spices and a recipe for how to use the seasonings.
